Breastfeeding In Public
anytime anywhere
Getting Started
The key to nursing in public is to begin the feeding when your baby shows the first signs of hunger. These include:
- sucking on his hands and fingers
- making sucking noises with his mouth
- turning his head towards the breast

Feeding your baby when he is relaxed will help begin the feeding with ease — waiting until your baby begins to cry may cause stress or attract unwanted attention.

Planning for Your First Trip
Each time you nurse, you will feel more confident and at ease with breastfeeding your baby. This helps you feel comfortable when you begin to breastfeed in public. Here are some tips to help get you started:
- Wear comfortable clothing, such as layered shirts, that can easily adjust while nursing.
- Find the most relaxing position for you and your baby.
- Consider practicing at home in front of a mirror.

Other things to do before leaving home:
- Nurse your baby right before you leave.
- Pack a baby blanket to place over your shoulder or carry your baby in a sling, in case you want extra privacy while you breastfeed.

Seven, including the one who is enjoying mom’s milk.
Just Sit Back and Relax
Look for a comfortable place where you can nurse when you arrive. This allows you to be ready when your baby is hungry.

Many stores have areas designated for moms and babies that provide a quiet place to sit, as well as, a diaper-changing table.

Some places, like food courts and in-store restaurants, offer open seating.

Be Confident
Be confident when nursing in public. Know that you are doing the best thing for your baby.

When talking to people while nursing, keep eye contact with them so they will know it is all right for them to look at you.

If you are by yourself in a large open area, focus on your baby’s eyes and face. After a while, you won’t even know there are others around you and they will be less likely to notice you.
Educate Others

❤ Texas law protects your right to breastfeed in public.
❤ Your local WIC office can provide you with a pocket-sized card that explains this law. Use it to educate others about the right to breastfeed in public.

Nursing in public becomes easier each time you do it. By nursing in public, you are showing other mothers that it is possible to give your baby the best nutrition anytime, anyplace.
