Play and Motor Development: Selected eBooks

NEW! Activity kit for babies and toddlers at risk. Deborah Fein, 2016.

Experts present more than 100 games and activities designed to support development in children from birth to age 3. A child's daily routines are transformed into learning opportunities that promote crucial abilities, like how to imitate others or use simple hand gestures to convey wants and needs.

Building brains: 600 activity ideas for young children. Suzanne Gellens, 2013.

Building Brains expands young children's learning with six hundred brain-based, developmentally appropriate activity ideas. It combines the latest information on brain development with activities that support children's learning and enrich any early childhood curriculum. Rather than step-by-step activities, this book is filled with open-ended ideas that early child professionals can execute in a variety of ways, depending on children's needs and interests. Ideas are organized by age - from age zero to five - and learning domains.

Developmentally appropriate play: guiding young children to a higher level.

Gaye Gronlund, 2011.

Following the Developmentally Appropriate Practice guidelines from the National Association for the Education of Young Children (NAEYC), this resource helps teachers enhance the depth and richness of children's play. Chapter topics include identifying and planning purposeful play, incorporating standards into play, and suggestions to reach higher levels of play.

Play and Motor Development: Selected eBooks (continued)

Enhancing learning through play: a developmental perspective for early years settings, 2nd ed. Christine Macintyre, 2012.

Written to support early childhood professionals who are fascinated by the complexities and implications of early development, this fully updated second edition explains why children need to play and offers practical guidance on how best to support children's development and learning through play.

Learning through play: for babies, toddlers, and young children, 2nd ed. Tina Bruce, 2011.

This book is designed to help adults who spend time with babies, toddlers, and children 0–7 years. The focus is on developing learning through play. The aim is to help adults support children so that their play contributes in deep and far reaching, lasting ways to their lifelong learning during the first years of a child's life, and hopefully beyond.

Let them play: an early learning (un)curriculum. Denita Dinger and Jeff A. Johnson, 2012.

Children's play is focused, purposeful, and full of learning. As children play, they master motor development, learn language and social skills, think creatively, and make cognitive leaps. This (un)curriculum is all about supporting child-led play, trusting children as capable and engaged learners, and forgoing prescribed activities. The authors explain the guiding principles of an (un)curriculum and how it gives children the freedom to play, including suggestions for creating spaces that promote healthy development and learning, and supporting those who believe in the learning power of play.

Play from birth to twelve: contexts, perspectives, and meanings. Doris Pronin Fromberg and Doris Bergen, 2006.

This book is a comprehensive investigation of the nature and influence of childhood play, designed to help teachers understand and support children's play activity and learning. It includes sections on play development; meanings of play; educational contexts for play; social and physical contexts for play; and particular meanings embedded in play.

Play: the pathway from theory to practice. Sandra Heidemann and Deborah Hewitt, 2009.

Play skills are life skills; as children develop them, they also learn important social skills that they will use throughout their lives. Teachers will find successful strategies for implementing changes in the classroom to enhance the environment for play and techniques to help support children's development. This book contains activity ideas that encourage play skills, checklists to help identify where children are having problems, specific teaching strategies, and assessment options. It also examines how play theory translates into practice.

Play and Motor Development: Selected eBooks (continued)

eBook titles are available through Ebsco eBooks.
Contact the Library for passwords.

Play therapy for very young children. Charles E. Schaefer, 2008.

This book presents the major models of play interventions with very young children and their families. Contributors address specific therapies from cultures around the world, including caregiver-toddler play therapy, filial play therapy, mother-infant play, and play based interventions with young children with disabilities and autism.

Play therapy: the art of the relationship, 3rd ed. Gary Landreth, 2012.

This comprehensive text describes the process of creating therapeutic relationships with children through play. It details the author's Child-Centered Play Therapy model, which stresses the importance of understanding the child's world and perspective. This approach facilitates the play therapy process while allowing therapist and client to fully connect.

Play therapy with families: a collaborative approach to healing. Nancy Riedel Bowers, 2014.

This book provides a thorough description of play from academics, researchers, and relevant writers who review it historically. It contains a unique approach for helping families, outlining an in-depth review of play and its relevancy to healing for children and families. Bowers explains the Collaborative Play Therapy Model.

Play therapy with traumatized children: a prescriptive approach. Paris Goodyear-Brown, 2011.

The author codifies the process of play therapy in her model, Flexibly Sequential Play Therapy (FSPT). The FSPT model creates a safe place for trauma processing by augmenting the child's adaptive coping strategies and soothing his or her physiology. This model allows the therapist to correct the child's cognitive distortions as the therapist invites gradual exposure to trauma content through play.

Play and Motor Development: Selected eBooks (continued)

Retro baby: cut back on all the gear and boost your baby's development with more than 100 time-tested activities. Anne H. Zachary, 2014.

Baby bouncers, carriers, electronic toys, and "educational" videos are intended to make our children smarter and our lives easier, but can their overuse negatively impact infant development? Absolutely. This book helps caregivers understand the potential dangers of extended equipment use and overexposure to technology.

A sourcebook for sensorimotor learning: simple low-cost games and activities for young children including those with autism (ADHD, Sensory Processing Disorder, and other learning differences). Lisa Kurtz, 2014.

Using materials that are readily-available in most households or that can be purchased or homemade at a very low cost, these games and activities are appropriate for all children, including those with autism, ADHD, and other learning challenges. The book includes clear descriptions of how to carry out each activity, helpful illustrations, and ways to adapt activities according to the child's individual needs. In addition, a comprehensive reference guide to the activities enables easy searching for games suited to the development of particular skills.

Teach me with pictures: 40 fun picture scripts to develop play and communication skills in children on the autism spectrum. Ruth Harris, 2013.

This book provides fun and practical ideas to help motivate and extend communication and play skills in children with autism with the support of pictures. The book describes how picture scripts can help facilitate play and learning and provides 40 scripts across a range of different activities such as drawing, cooking, using construction toys, imaginative play, arts and crafts, and social games. Tasks are presented in small manageable step-by-step picture sequences and support a range of skills including following instructions, increasing independence, comprehension, story-telling, and choice-making.

Typical and atypical motor development. David Sugden, 2013.

This book describes motor development from conception through emerging adulthood. It explains motor development from a number of theoretical, empirical, and experiential perspectives.

NEW! Young children's play and environmental education in early childhood education. Amy Cutter-Mackenzie, 2014.

The authors suggest ways for young children to have meaningful engagement with the outdoors and the environment through play.
