

SERUM SEPARATION DUE TO IMPROPER DRYING OR SPECIMEN COLLECTION

Serum separation is often caused by improper drying techniques, but can also occur in specimens collected on babies with low hematocrit levels. In each of the below specimens, the evidence of serum separation can be seen in the light halo around the spots.

