Postpartum Hemorrhage

About a week after having her baby, Ashley experienced symptoms and was rushed to hospital with a postpartum hemorrhage, which put her life at risk. Ashley, with her husband Bryan by her side, recounts the experience of how she knew something wasn't right and how they felt people did not always listen.

They share their story to educate people on the importance of learning the warning signs, advocating when something doesn't feel right and listening to women when they say something doesn't feel right. Women know their bodies best.
